mspWellness Champions Designation Application

Workplace wellness programs contribute to a healthier, happier and more productive workforce. The public health departments from Hennepin County and the City of Minneapolis, the Minneapolis Regional Chamber and their partners have created this designation to recognize and celebrate organizations who work to positively affect the health and well-being of their employees and communities. Organizations that create, implement, and promote wellness programs as part of their organizational culture will be recognized through this program as a mspWellness Champions.

mspWellness Champions create, execute, and promote wellness programs as part of their organizational culture.

Applications are accepted on a rolling basis so organizations can apply to be a mspWellness Champion at anytime throughout the year. An annual recognition event is hosted each spring and organizations who qualify for designation prior to June 15th will be featured at the event.

Qualifying worksites have a physical location in the state of Minnesota and have a minimum of 10 employees located in the state.

It is estimated that this application process will take around 20 minutes. You are able to save a draft of your application. After you click "save as a draft", you will receive an email from Start Up Space, our technology partner, with details about how to access your saved draft. If you do not receive an email promptly please check your spam filters or contact helpdesk@startupspace.app for support.

Designation Criteria

This application is organized into five categories designed to evaluate the wellness initiatives taking place at your organization. The categories are: 1. Foundational Elements 2. Assessment and Evaluation 3. Policies 4. Practices (Systems and Environmental Supports) 5. Programs and Employee Engagement As you begin to answer the questions regarding your wellness programs and initiatives, we recognize that you may have experienced a disruption over the past year. Your answers can reflect initiatives that began prior to the pandemic but may have been put on hold or changed due to the disruption. Your organization does not need to check every box in order to qualify for the designation. We have established a threshold of minimum points required to be considered a mspWellness Champion. Feedback on application and outcomes will be available on request.

Foundational Elements

A successful, results-oriented and sustainable wellness program has a number of foundational elements. These elements are the building blocks of a worksite wellness program and provide organizational support for implementation of specific strategies. Leadership support is demonstrated when senior leaders align the organization's health promotion efforts with the organization's primary mission and provide resources for and participate in the wellness program.

Foundational Elements 1 - Leadership supports our organization's wellness program as demonstrated by: *

- 1. An identified champion or spokesperson from senior-level management who delivers health messages and promotes wellness activities.
- 2. Designation of a coordinator to lead the wellness committee and direct wellness efforts.
- 3. Approval of an annual budget or identification of funds for health promotion.
- 4. Integration of health promotion into the organizational structure and culture (for example, health promotion goals are aligned with business goals and the organization's mission statement).
- 5. Support and buy-in from all levels of management.
- 6. Participation of managers and/or decision makers in health promotion activities.
- 7. The organization providing affordable health care for all employees.
- 8. The wellness coordinator reporting directly to senior-level management.
- Other

Foundational Elements 2 - To provide structure and sustainability, we have: *

- 1. Measurable goals and objectives based on needs and interests identified through data (for example, health screenings, interest surveys, culture audit).
- 2. A written strategic plan detailing how to reach goals and objectives.
- 3. An active wellness committee.
- 4. A wellness "identity" (for example, a brand name, logo, theme) for the organization's wellness program
- 5. A comprehensive communication plan for health promotion efforts.
- 6. A process to designate wellness committee volunteers.
- 7. Annual reporting to management on wellness goals, objectives, and results (for example, HRA, participation rates).
- 8. Integration of health promotion into the organization's benefits plan (for example, reduced copays for wellness participation).
- 9. A mission statement for the wellness program.
- 10. Created and/or invested in a Diversity, Equity and Inclusion council or committee within our organization.

Assessment and Evaluation

Assessment is the collection and review of information to assess current status; evaluation is the review of data to document results or progress toward goals. Employee engagement is an important part of the relationship between an organization and its employees. Engaged employees are enthusiastic about their work and take action to further the organization's reputation and interests.

Assessment and Evaluation 1 - To assess a baseline for our health promotion efforts, we: *

- 1. Collect aggregate health data on our employee population (for example, medical claims, demographic data, workers' compensation, injury records).
- 2. Conduct a facility survey (for example, a survey to examine workstation design, vending machine options, noise levels)
- 3. Offer biometric screenings for employees (for example, blood pressure, cholesterol, height, weight).
- 4. Survey employees to determine their health and wellness needs and interests.
- 5. Conduct an employee engagement survey.
- 6. Conduct interviews with small groups of employees on organizational culture.
- 7. Conduct a culture audit or an organizational climate survey.
- 8. Have a strategic plan that addresses employee engagement through goals and action items.
- 9. Participate in a culture walk. Copy this link in a browser window to access more information: <https://rb.gy/cn2aw7>
- 10. Conduct annual employee health risk assessment (HRA).
- Other

Assessment and Evaluation 2 - To evaluate the effects of our health promotion efforts, we *

- 1. Record participation in wellness activities (for example, number of employees attending a brown-bag seminar or participating in a behavior change campaign).
- 2. Track use of company health and wellness facilities or equipment (for example, number of employees using fitness center, walking path, or blood pressure monitors).
- 3. Conduct employee satisfaction surveys about health promotion activities.
- 4. Measure and evaluate employee behavior change in response to environmental changes or programs (for example, vending machine healthy snacks sales trends, stairwell use observations, weight change surveys, commuting by bicycle or transit surveys).
- 5. Compare program participation from year to year.
- 6. Compare program satisfaction among programs.
- 7. Measure change in health care claims or absenteeism.
- 8. Conduct ROI or other financial assessment of our wellness program.
- 11. Compare the results of employee health risk assessments (HRA) from year to year to evaluate changes and trends.
- 10. Provide opportunities for employees to review and provide feedback on health-related policies and practices.
- Other

Policies/Procedures

An organization's wellness policies and procedures are principles, rules, and guidelines that have been adopted to influence decisions, actions, and other matters related to employee health and wellness.

Policies/Procedures 1 - We have formal, written policies that: *

- 1. Provide benefits to family members and domestic partners.
- 2. Require seat belt use when riding or driving on company time.
- 3. Require tobacco-free grounds, including e-cigarettes.
- 4. Define emergency procedures at work.
- 5. Prohibit tobacco use, including e-cigarettes, in the worksite and in company-owned vehicles.
- 6. Promote physical activity during working hours.
- 7. Provide for onsite breastfeeding support (private room and pumping area, flexible breaks).
- 8. Support alternate forms of transportation to/from work.
- 9. Promote healthy food and beverage choices at work.
- 10. Allow for flexible work scheduling (flex-time schedules and work remotely/telework).
- 11. Define and promote respect in the workplace, including prohibiting bullying, harassment, and other inappropriate conduct.
- 12. Address Diversity, Equity and Inclusion.
- 13. Reflect the diversity and needs of our staff (ie leave policies, holiday observance, etc.).
- 14. Consider employee salaries when determining staff contributions to premiums; enabling staff earning lower wages to have the same coverage as staff earning higher wages, while their premium contributions are scaled to their salary.
